

HEROIC & VILLAINOUS TRAITS

When creating a character, the GM, or player with the the formers approval, can use theses tables to create a protagonist with a more villainous or heroic bent. The tables are not exhaustively so, including as they do much grey areas an some more interpretable traits, but they represent a general tendency towards certain roleplay choices.

This can be used to match the preference of the group as a whole or the theme of the game. Should the game be a grim dark full of deceit and dark doings then the villainous traits can be used and if the game is classic tale of virtuous figures and selfless deeds then the heroic traits will serve well.

Theses tables can be used to reign in those players that feel overly emboldened by certain traits to be anti-social within the group. Such people who “just playing their characters” to the detriment of general enjoyment or progression in the game can be limited to heroic traits. This removes the excuse for such behaviour and will hopeful encourage them to adopt a more agreeable play style.
